

Women defy authorities by taking abortion pills in Belfast

PSNI tried to remove one of the pro-choice activists but gave up after stand-off about 5 hours ago

Pro-choice campaigners have taken abortion pills outside Northern Ireland’s main court buildings in defiance of the strict laws governing terminations.

Northern Ireland is the only part of the UK where the procedure is not legal, aside from exceptional cases, and the Republic has voted to allow it in early pregnancy.

There was a heavy security presence and counter-demonstrations by anti-abortion activists in Belfast city centre.

Police Service of Northern Ireland (PSNI) officers moved in to seize some of the pills and the tiny robot, less than the size of an A4 page, which was used to distribute them.

Officers also attempted to remove one of the women who openly took a tablet.

They led her away from the centre of the event and a tense stand-off ensued, with many campaigners gathering around her, insisting that she should not be arrested.

After several minutes, the officers abandoned their attempt to speak with the woman and left the area.

PSNI officers watch on as abortion rights campaign group Rosa hold a protest on Thursday in Belfast. Photograph: Charles McQuillan/Getty Images

Eleanor Crossey Malone, from socialist feminist movement Rosa (Reproductive Rights Against Oppression, Sexism and Austerity), was one of those who took the pill in front of television cameras.

She said: “I have taken this in defiance of the extremely outdated, medieval, anti-choice laws that exist in Northern Ireland.

RELATED

A resounding and emphatic Yes – the people have spoken

Ireland votes to remove constitutional ban on abortion by resounding two-thirds majority

How the Yes and No sides won and lost the abortion referendum

“We are not willing in the wake of the repeal referendum to be left behind any longer.

“Northern Ireland after repeal will be one of only two jurisdictions remaining in Europe to criminalise women effectively for having abortions.

“We are not willing to accept it any more.”

Earlier, campaigners addressed the crowd, among them pro-choice activists and Solidarity–People Before Profit Ruth Coppinger TD.

After a tense hour-long encounter staged in an open area between Belfast’s Crown and High Courts, the pro-choice activists boarded a bus.

They drove towards a constituency office of the anti-abortion Democratic Unionists, who oppose liberalisation in Northern Ireland, to continue their day of protest.

Legislation

British prime minister Theresa May has come under pressure to legislate for abortion in Northern Ireland since the Stormont Assembly has been suspended for months.

At Thursday’s protest there was chanting involving supporters of both sides of the debate. Opponents included anti-abortion activist Bernie Smyth.

Three women gathered in a circle and others dressed as handmaidens, in reference to the Margaret Atwood novel The Handmaid’s Tale about women’s rights being stripped away, stood behind them.

The three women produced and took the tablets.

Ms Crossey Malone added: “Women every day in Northern Ireland are using these pills. As long as we don’t talk about it, as long as we act like it is a secret, politicians are not under pressure to legislate on this.

“We are bringing it into the spotlight in order to demand that politicians take action on this immediately and extend the 1967 Abortion Act to Northern Ireland.”

She said the PSNI was under enormous pressure and was aware of the international pressure inspired by the repeal movement.

“There is pressure on the state at every level to change the situation here, it has been described as a violation of human rights.”

She added that they were “willing to flout the law because we do believe it violates human rights”.

Ms Coppinger said it was an “outrage” that the 1967 Abortion Act had not been extended to Northern Ireland.

“There is no way that Northern Ireland is going to get left behind.” – PA

READ MORE

-  Abortion referendum tracker: check your politicians' views
-  Abortion: The Facts
-  Mattie McGrath denies planning to obstruct Abortion Bill
-  Newton Emerson: Nationalists perform sharp U-turn on abortion

» Government may cover cost of care for women seeking terminations

Abortion referendum

Get the latest news and best analysis about the Referendum on the regulation of termination of pregnancy here

Facts have no agenda. Real news has value. Subscribe.

MORE FROM THE IRISH TIMES

Irish News	Opinion	International	Circuit Court
Two boys in critical condition after swimming incident in Ennis	Vincent Boland: Italy's crisis is now democratic as well as financial	David Meyler unhappy with how Hull City handled exit	Son of late billionaire charged with unlawful possession of over 1,200 bullets

MORE IN SPONSORED

Ten HR strategies to boost productivity and retain talent	Laya Life: mortgage protection in a matter of minutes	"We can solve the greatest challenges of our time using technology and people"	The ingredient series: meet the makers
---	---	--	--

ADVERTISEMENT

ADVERTISEMENT

Download de Mac reiniger.

Bescherm, beveilig e
reinig uw Mac Reinig
Mac bestanden.

mackeeper.com