Speakers at the rally said planned legislation that would make abortion illegal even for women who are victims of incest or rape or whose lives were endangered by a pregnancy would be "barbaric."

Those who are found to have terminated their pregnancies are liable to be sent to jail. Those drafting the bill say they want to reduce the number of abortions in Poland. A petition supporting the bill to outlaw abortion has already gathered around 450,000 signatures.

"We will not allow our hospitals to be turned into torture chambers and our doctors into prison guards," said one of the organizers of the protest, Agnieszka Dziemianowicz-Bak, a member of the left-wing Together party, as cited by AP.

However, an alternative petition by the pro-choice Save Women coalition has been signed over 215,000 times and says that women should be allowed to have an abortion up to the 12th week of a pregnancy.

A general strike by women is planned to take place on Monday, October 3 in protest against the proposed abortion ban. They want to cause disruptions in order to highlight their cause.

Demonstrations are planned in 60 cities across the country, with many companies in Poland saying they will support the rallies by not opening their doors for business, the Krakow Post reports.

Last year in June, Women on Waves, a Netherlands-based non-profit organization, launched an 'abortion drone' that dropped pregnancy-terminating pills in Poland. Taking off over the border in Germany before heading to the Polish border town of Slubice, it dropped two packs of mifepristone and misoprostol to two women, who took the pills when they arrived.

A survey published this week by Newsweek Polska magazine has shown that around 74 percent of Polish people are sticking to a third opinion – that the current restriction should stay in place without any changes.

Mass protests organized by human rights activists and women's rights groups have been sweeping the country, while a number of anti-abortion groups in staunchly Catholic Poland have been staging their own rallies which have attracted thousands of supporters.

· 1d · Edited But we are autonomous. That is the defining line. Despite my strong feeling to not have children I believe that the nation in which I currently reside and its society are wholly undeserving of any future offspring I may produce. I actually feel that way about a lot of nations. When global population slips past 8 or 9 billion you may be thanking me for my sacrifice in sustaining the ecosystems which will allow your own offspring geater longevity and fewer hardships.

· 1d Death of women's rights, and the "rebirth" of the unborn's rights. One hundred million abortions worldwide now, points to irresponsible people, and a race of genocidal maniacs. Use a condom, take it up the bum, use some toys, or go on the pill you freaks. Abortions should only be condoned in cases of rape, or deformed, or debilitating factors, that might create an unusually painful life for the child, and the parents.

Women's "choices" to have their little daughters and sons killed in their wombs certainly should matter under the rule of law --the killing should be stopped..

When it comes to 'choices', we women have every right to choose what political party we will vote for, what job we will do, what friends we will make, what we will have for breakfast.

But none of us has a right to abuse another human being in our power and under our care.

No human being has ownership and lethal disposal rights over another...

So what about women who are raped and then get pregnant from being raped? Are they supposed to just accept that they should just keep the rapist's child?

Pure evil...So many people obsessed with killing human life forms at any stage of its existence....under umbrella of "women's rights" so killing humans in their fully developed stage is not enough?

If polio and a host of many other potentially fatal diseases and conditions were still around to naturally limit the size of our herds then we wouldn't need so many abortions. It is called responsibility. Not only to ourselves but to the planet and the multitude of other living organisms living on it. We reduce the populations of coyotes, rabbits, prairie dogs, and many others in the name of environmental sustainability, we should be doing the same to our own populations.

^{1d} Because the new religion is the NWO and you have to follow their god Mammon otherwise you won't get invited to the intellectuals and trendsetters dinner parties.

That is what is at stake not life or death for the innocent. How pathetic is the modern world.

World is yawning at feminism that since the 1970s reduced the standards of living for women in some instances by 60%.

When they were bailing out banks did they worry about feminists? No just when it suits a pro-abortion agenda.
